

NEWS OF THE STAGE WORLD.

Of Course, the Russell-Perugini Wedding Is the Main Topic.

Mansfield Rebukes the Gas Man at a Washington Theatre.

Sign Perugini, who has now become the legal protector of his, timid little Lillian Russell, gave a farewell supper to a few of his friends at his rooms in West Twenty-third street, Saturday night, after the performance of "The Princess Nicotine." One of Perugini's invitations ran as follows: "Won't you give me the pleasure of your company, and help my other chums in feeling me off from bachelorhood to—paradise!" The gallant Signor was in an ecstatic mood, and really believed himself like those bridegrooms you read about in novels, rather than the poor fellow who is the subject of to-day. Miss Russell was also in a state of great satisfaction, and a day or two ago she told her sister Susan, "Sue, I feel like a girl again, as young as ever. I forget everything but the present."

"How pretty," cried Sue, with all a sister's privilege to be unpleasant. "But, Nell, dear, if you remember should want looking at any time, come to Sister Sue."

There will be a mob at the Casino tonight to see the Hoboken-made bride and groom. Nothing has been omitted. Even Justice Mulvey, who has officiated at the nuptial knot, has been invited to occupy a box. Huber, who last week advertised a bargain to his friends, who tied the nuptial knot, has been invited to occupy a box. Huber, who last week advertised a bargain to his friends, who tied the nuptial knot, has been invited to occupy a box.

There is a new story about Mansfield. The actor appeared in Washington the week before last, and his performance was not bad. He was for a time quite amiable. Towards the end of the week, however, he became very disagreeable. The gas man at Albion's has that very disagreeable habit of continually sucking his teeth. One night he was at his table in the wings indulging in this very unusual pastime. Mansfield was also in the wings, waiting for his cue. He was so distressed he turned about with the same expression on his face as the gas man. "Beau Burnell!" when he requests Mr. Vincent to cease washing his hands with his teeth. One night he was at his table in the wings indulging in this very unusual pastime. Mansfield was also in the wings, waiting for his cue. He was so distressed he turned about with the same expression on his face as the gas man.

Miss Victory Bateman, of Professional Woman's League renown, arrived in the city from Washington yesterday with the Von Yonson. The actress, who did not care to discuss her situation with the League. As an intimation, however, of the fact that she was in earnest, she asserted that she was going to see Lawyer Hummel about the matter to-day.

A horrible case of brutality has just been reported by a woman who is in the company. In the organization are John and Ella McGreger, father and daughter. The other night, when the actress knocked the girl down and kicked her three times. The manager of the company, who is a stage actor, and a number of others rushed to her aid, and there was a general set-to, from which McGreger emerged with black eyes. The actor, it appears, has been drawing his daughter's salary. She was formerly a child actress and had helped to support him all her life. The members of the company declared that he would hardly be allowed to continue in the company. The actors and actresses in the organization were loud in their indignation.

Carmentella, who has been fading from the memory of the theatre, has been engaged to appear at the Vaudeville Club next week. She still demands a colossal salary, but the Vaudeville people don't mind that.

Miss Eleanor Mayo, who twinkled at us suddenly like a beautiful star, and then disappeared, has been engaged for a week at the Vaudeville Club. She will play the title role. Laura Joyce Bell, Lennox and Sig. Campanari have also been engaged.

"The Senator," which is to be revived at the Star Theatre next week, will be rehearsed with a special cast. The Vaudeville Club next week. She still demands a colossal salary, but the Vaudeville people don't mind that.

Charles Coghlan, did not appear in "Lady Barton," at the Fifth Avenue Theatre, Saturday, and John T. Sullivan played the part. In the afternoon Miss Coghlan apologized to the audience for her brother's absence.

KITTY'S MISTAKE.

A Little Heartache Which Was Happily Chased Away.

"Kitty—don't you ever mean to marry?"

The speaker was pretty Naomi Stearns. She was seated in Kitty Preston's pretty morning-room—just the place for girlish confidence.

"There, now, Naomi! You needn't be so that sort of question just because you are engaged and I am not!" Kitty laughed as she spoke.

"But seriously, my Kitty,"

"Seriously, Naomi, have not as yet found one I care for?" As Kitty spoke her cheeks flushed and she questioned herself if she was telling the truth.

"How about Philip Morton?" asked Naomi.

"Nonsense! Phil hasn't stability of character. He would never cling to anything. Why should I be afraid to trust myself with Phil?"

"You may be right," assented Naomi.

"I have heard father say that Phil was a 'rolling stone' but there's Harry Brooks: not much roll to him."

"No—Harry is lazy. No girl ought to marry a lazy fellow until he gives evidence of some energy of character."

"Well, then, there is Howard Graves."

"He thinks too much of his money and position, and, after all, he isn't any better than many a poorer man. That is, I don't want any of them. It's not that I think I am too good for them, but I don't want to marry. Kitty gave her hairbrush an impatient little toss.

"Well, don't you stay long, Kitty. You may make a mistake in that," said

SPORTS NEWS AND GOSSIP.

The Pennant-Winning Make-Up of the New York Ball Club.

Jack Dempsey Going South—Made His Big Benefit.

The New York Baseball Club is in a howl. It is a pretty strong organization, and ought to have an equal chance with any of the clubs in the League to win the pennant—that is, if the amount of energy expended in howling for the great somebody else of some other club is utilized in strengthening the material now on hand. The Club has good hitters in Ward, Davis, Connor, Therman, Doyle, Wilson and Van Halteren. It has two of the three first-class batteries, and perhaps may develop one or two more from the new pitchers signed. With Ward, Murphy, Wilson, Fuller, Davis, Burke, Starford, Doyle and Van Halteren it is, perhaps, the best base-running team in the League. All these things, in conjunction with the fact that it has last year's experience to improve team work, should come pretty near landing the Club at the top with a competent guiding hand without any more players.
